

IBF Masterclass with Robeco and CFAS : Bio-diversity loss - the next big challenge

Biodiversity is declining faster than at any time in human history, and the pressures driving this decline are still increasing. Over half of the global economy is dependent on well-functioning ecosystems. Further loss of biodiversity could pose risks to financial markets. Reversing biodiversity and ecosystem loss is essential to preserve wealth and well-being.

At the COP 15, the UN Biodiversity Conference, in December 2022 countries plan to agree a new global treaty to halt and reverse losses of the planet's plants, animals and
